From the mid-twenty-first century, you are caught in a war between the U-232 and the federation. Suddenly, you are being trapped inside the earth. You are just a survivor of the U-232. Thanks for reading this. Bye. Hahaha no worries, it's really fun. I make my avatar wear all sorts of weird stuff too and I often wind up with way too much stuff on. I forgot to tell you, you start the game in a plane (you gotta fly it out or you'll be stuck on the ground until you get lower on armor). When you land it switches to a turret and you'll be in high-def VR. When you move your arms or head, your arms/head will be visible through the glass. When you look down, you can see the planet for a split second before the last screen of the game shows up. When you go into a side-view, you'll see the pilot. They sometimes say things like "Panic, it's getting worse!" or "Impact in 60 seconds" or "I'm sorry I missed, the thrust failed again" or "On target, what was that?". You can use your left and right motion to control your tilt, which controls your shield. Right/left tilt controls your forward movement. Bottom/up tilt controls your elevation. If you tilt to the side, you will lose shield and move slower. By tilting in the downward direction you can jump. Your shield will drop to zero and you will still be able to move. You are basically a person who is starting to get sick of going to work everyday and you are the only person who can help turn the planet around. You can at any time jump right from the ground or from a vehicle and you will be flung into the air. In VR, you are in high-def VR. The player is able to look around, but any movement is relative to the direction they are looking. So if they turn, they will move relative to the direction they are looking. You are able to look down and see the planet, but they are close-up. The earth is much larger than in a single-screen game. Your feet are not limited to the area of the map. All the way around the planet is really large. You are trapped in a giant spaceship that is rolling into your bowels. However, it is a 'cave

What's new:

Jamyla Renee Aragon-Jones is shipping out to the Republic to join the Collegiate Fleet, and will navigate her way home in style. But on her way back to Earth, the battleship suffers technical failure. After arriving late to class, she is confronted with the consequences—including a nasty teething curse—of not following the strictest rules. Return To Earth Five years later, Jamyla is far from home. Now a Warrant Officer and navigating specialist on the IED Victory, Jamyla spends her time flying circles around enemy ships and running errands for the Captain. But when she finally lands in port, her vacation days are at an end, and if she wants to get home, there's only one place to go. The Battle of Albireo Jamyla has been enjoying her IED Victory experience. It's almost as good as flying Black Ops as herself. But then one day she gets a call from the Commander asking for an emergency rendezvous at a training ship. Jamyla isn't sure what's up...until the Commander swears her to a tight seal. Jamyla will have to stay at IED Victory for a while—but that's okay. She's used to trains! Atlas of Scorpii Jamyla is a navigator, not a fighter pilot. The Republic has thousands of ships in the Hyperlane, but Jamyla's been stuck on a training ship, learning how to use a manual shift throttle at a rate of knots and working to gain those last few points that will make her a Warrant Officer. When she boards the IED Victory to take her first combat mission as Warrant, she expects to see the action—but her first up close and personal combat experience is a little more traumatic than she's prepared for... Rebirth Elli Watanabe was a great pilot once. Now the woman just directs a recalcitrant starfighter squadron to fight for her life. Stripped of rank and property and banished to the backwaters of her once-successful career. If Elli ever thought her life was complicated, it just got worse. She'll need to do everything she can to stay alive, lest her dreams be taken from her and use in cold, hard, black porcelain. [1]Tatterdemalion Three years ago, Elli was
