Will this technology be enough to make FIFA “the best FIFA ever”? With multiple high-profile football stars set to feature in the game this autumn – including Neymar, Cristiano Ronaldo, Lionel Messi, Kylian Mbappe, Eden Hazard, Edin Dzeko, Romelu Lukaku, Koke and Sergio Ramos – is the integration of the hyper-realism of motion capture technology and true-to-life player styles enough to make FIFA “the best FIFA ever”? What will the other main game modes include? There will be a variety of modes in FIFA 22, with “The Journey,” which is essentially a career mode, included in the base game. There will be additional story-based content available through player progression in “The Journey” including the ability to play as the US Men’s National Team from Day 1 of the game. FIFA “The Journey” also features franchise-only modes in “Players,” “World Cup” and “FIFA Ultimate Team.” Franchise mode, “Players,” will offer players the opportunity to play as their favorite soccer players. The game will feature more than 50 unique players, with each player having a signature feature, star player and unique personality. Players include Lionel Messi, Wayne Rooney and Kylian Mbappe among others. “World Cup” mode also includes a simulation of the global tournament, from qualification to knock-out stages. “FIFA Ultimate Team” will see the introduction of new “My Team” functionality, allowing players to create a team of players and then take them on the pitch against other players in a multiplayer mode. In addition, there are new “weekly challenges,” which will take place in specific parts of the game world during the week. They will be “danger zones,” where players can lose in-game currency and points if they are caught. “Crossover Battles,” which will introduce third-person options to online duels, will be included as well. Can we expect more content to be announced this September? The FIFA 22 news drop, which will feature content announcements, will be livestreamed on Twitch on Thursday, September 13 at 8:00 a.m. Pacific Time (11:00 a.m. Eastern). The announcement will also
