41 15:47 The Art Of Racing at Indianapolis - By Bud Denker The Art Of Racing at Indianapolis - By Bud Denker The Art Of Racing at Indianapolis - By Bud Denker The Art Of Racing at Indianapolis - By Bud Denker This book is the most authoritative story ever written of the greatest race in North America, the Indianapolis 500. When it was first held in 1911, the Indianapolis Motor Speedway was a dusty open track in the center of a cow pasture on the southeast side of Indianapolis. The following year it was moved to its present site, a forested ridge on the far side of town. A relentlessly determined group of men and women, including such well-known figures as Wilbur Shaw, Eddie Rickenbacker, and Louis Meyer - owner of the Indianapolis Star - began work to build and shape the track into a racing giant. Boarded together by editor Bud Denker, The Art of Racing at Indianapolis takes you inside the story of a billion-dollar industry, the first professional sports franchise in America. Also Included Is an Account of the First Hundred Indianapolis 500 Races, Life and Times of The Track, The Racing Encyclopedia, The Biography of Speedway First Driver, The Racing Register, The Official Encyclopedia of the Indianapolis 500, The Boats, The History and Development of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, A History of the Indianapolis 500, Race by Race Coverage, Social History, and Facts and Figures. In recent population-based studies, severe chronic anemia was found to be associated with an increased risk of ischemic stroke and mortality after stroke. However, in the acute phase of stroke, only a limited number of studies have investigated the influence of anemia, but this has not been specifically compared with chronic anemia. We enrolled 818 consecutive stroke patients (mean age 68 years, 47.7% women) in the acute phase of stroke who had been admitted to our center. Anemia was defined according to World Health Organization criteria: hemoglobin (Hb) level below 12 g/dL in men and below 11 g/dL in women. The occurrence and severity of stroke were assessed by using the National Institutes of Health Stroke Scale (NIHSS) score, and treatment was performed according to our local protocol. Outcome was assessed by using a modified Rankin scale at 3 months after stroke. In this study we did not find any association of anemia with NIHSS score (P = .11), the frequency of a favorable outcome (mRS, 0-2; P = .15), or mortality (P = .56). However, in univariate and multivariate regression analysis, acute anemia was found to be an independent predictor of treatment with low-molecular-weight heparin and an independent risk factor for the presence of a thrombus on computed tomography angiography in the middle cerebral artery (M1) (P = .047 and P later, it appeared that the whole country wanted me to run for the Senate, but I had no desire to be involved in politics.
