According to a report by The National Post, a mental health facility known as Seaview Centre is shutting down permanently after 32 years in operation. Seaview opened its doors in April of 1989 in the northwestern Ontario community of Godbless, a village of less than 200 residents. The closure comes after an investigation by Ontario’s Office of the Independent Police Review Director, which found that there were shortcomings in Seaview’s emergency department and forensic unit. “There were a number of issues around competency, which we’ve identified,” said John Wright, the director of the OIPRD. During a press conference Thursday morning, Wright said that Seaview, which was owned and operated by the community, did not “appropriately have up-to-date and appropriate records of patients who had been evaluated and accepted by the facility.” “I think the message is it’s not acceptable,” said Wright. “It’s not 6d1f23a050
